The Massachusetts Historical Commission (MHC) has converted this paper record to digital format as part of ongoing projects to scan records of the Inventory of Historic Assets of the Commonwealth and National Register of Historic Places nominations for Massachusetts. Efforts are ongoing and not all inventory or National Register records related to this resource may be available in digital format at this time.

The MACRIS database and scanned files are highly dynamic; new information is added daily and both database records and related scanned files may be updated as new information is incorporated into MHC files. Users should note that there may be a considerable lag time between the receipt of new or updated records by MHC and the appearance of related information in MACRIS. Users should also note that not all source materials for the MACRIS database are made available as scanned images. Users may consult the records, files and maps available in MHC's public research area at its offices at the State Archives Building, 220 Morrissey Boulevard, Boston, open M-F, 9-5.

Users of this digital material acknowledge that they have read and understood the MACRIS Information and Disclaimer (http://mhc-macris.net/macrisdisclaimer.htm)

Data available via the MACRIS web interface, and associated scanned files are for information purposes only. ARCHITECTURAL DESCRIPTION \(\times\) see continuation sheet

Describe architectural features. Evaluate the characteristics of this building in terms of other buildings within the community.

This house is one of Concord center's best examples of one of the classic house-types of the second half of the eighteenth century, and the oldest structure on this section of Main Street west of Thoreau. It is a typical 2 1/2-story, two-room-deep farmhouse, with a pair of chimneys just behind the ridge, and a 1-story rear wing. The facade is five bays wide, and displays some of the Georgian-inspired decorative detail that appeared even on vernacular houses after 1750. A five-pane transom over the main entry (where the door is covered by a vertical-board storm door,) lets light into the central stair hall, and the molded roof cornice is embellished with both a dentil course and bead molding. At the entry, the molded lintel also has a dentil course, and simple pilasters with molded capitals flank the door. Typically, the cornerboards are narrow and plain. The roof gable ends are trimmed with a rake molding, but do not overhang the end walls. The windows are 6-over-9-sash, with projecting frames and molded crowns. A one-story rectangular bay window on the east end appears to be a late-nineteenth-century addition. A gabled front entry hood, probably a late-nineteenth- or early-twentieth-century addition, was removed some time after 1937. (Cont.)

HISTORICAL NARRATIVE see continuation sheet

Discuss the history of the building. Explain its associations with local (or state) history. Include uses of the building, and the role(s) the owners/occupants played within the community.

One of the most significant houses on lower Main Street, #325 was originally the farmhouse on the farm of Samuel Jones. It stood northeast across Main Street on part of the lot that is today #252. Its exact construction date is somewhat unclear, but a date on one of the chimneys says 1767. This tallies with one part of Ruth Wheeler's notes, which say that Capt. Samuel Jones, (1741-1812) bought the property on which it stood some time before 1772. This Samuel Jones was a blacksmith; he married Hepzibah, sister of Ephraim Jones. He was a captain in both the Third Regiment of the Militia and the Concord Light Infantry, and apparently owned the house until his death.

Owners' research has traced the subsequent property transfers as follows. 1812: estate of Capt. Jones owed $1584; property to be sold at auction. 1815: purchased by Amos Wood. 1820: Amos Wood gave it to David Wood, evidently a minor. Around this time the record becomes somewhat unclear, as other Wood family members and Ebenezer Conant all apparently had some connection with the property, which ended up in the hands of Elijah Wood, who is shown as owner in 1824. (See #41 Wood Street and #631 Main Street for more information on this branch of the Wood family.) By 1829 the house had been acquired by attorney Nathan Brooks and farmer Abel Moore, who sold it in that year to Elisha Fuller. (Cont.)

In the later 1800's this house shared a large, wide lot with the house just west at #333. Maps indicate that the barn/carriage house just to the rear was standing by 1875; it is still a well-preserved example of a small gable-end barn with rolling door and hay door in the gable.

Fuller, a lawyer, was evidently acting as agent for a physician, Dr. Thomas Foster, who died before the transaction could be completed. Elisha Fuller held the property until 1837, when he sold it to A.W. Fuller, also a lawyer. The remains of the farm, about nine acres, was then broken up with the house finally going to Ellen Fuller Channing as at least part owner, apparently as the result of an inheritance. (Other transactions during the 1840's had included a transfer from the last Jones owners [William and Hepsibeth] to John Cheney, and subsequently to John S. Keyes, who moved the house slightly to the west on its lot.) By 1849 Ellen's husband, William Ellery Channing, was the owner.

William Ellery Channing (1817-1901,) nephew of the Unitarian minister of the same name, was one of the most well-known American poets of his time, although he never achieved material success. As a young man he had sent some of his poetry to Ralph Waldo Emerson, and eventually became a close friend of Emerson, Thoreau, and Sanborn. When he and his wife expressed a desire to move to Concord, it was Thoreau (whose biography Channing later wrote) who arranged for them to live in the little cottage at 142 Cambridge Turnpike, where they moved in 1843. In 1844 Channing went to New York to be assistant editor of the Tribune. The Channings returned to Concord the next year, living for a while on Monument Street, then moved to this house in about 1849. (That is the date indicated by the deeds; it contradicts Sanborn's date of 1851-2, however.) Here they were visited on occasion by Ellen's sister, well-known editor and transcendentalist Margaret Fuller. Beginning in 1855 the west part of the house was rented by Franklin Sanborn, at whose house on Elm Street Channing was to spend his last years. (See #106 Elm Street.) Sanborn lived here with his sister, Sarah, for several years. In 1857 John Brown, of Harper's Ferry fame, stayed here as Sanborn's guest, and in the years prior to the Civil War, partly because of Sanborn's position as a leader of the anti-slavery movement, the house was frequently used by fugitive slaves as a stop on the "Underground Railroad."

Ellen Channing died in 1856, and in 1865 Channing sold the property to Frederic Hudson, a journalist who was one of the founders of the Associated Press, and editor of the New York Herald during the Civil War. Mr. Hudson took up residence in another house on the lot until his death in 1875, and for the rest of the nineteenth century the building underwent a succession of owners. In 1867 express agent, carriage builder, and former farmer L. Willis Bean and his wife Sarah purchased the building and moved it by a sled pulled by 22 yoke of oxen to its present site. (Cont.)

The Beans did not live here for very long, however. For five years, from 1873 to 1878, the house was owned by Elizabeth Hanscom, who sold it to Augustus and Corinne Chamberlaine. The Chamberlaines, who at that time were evidently living across the street at #310, built the barn on the property, rented out the house, and sold it in 1884 to Margarette Dorman. She sold it in 1887 to Mary L. James, wife of artist Robertson James. The Jameses apparently lived here only a short time, as they were soon to build a new residence on Nashawtuc Hill, but retained ownership of the house until they died. After Mary James' death in 1922 the property was inherited by a long-time tenant, Miss Harriet P. Rood, a teacher in the Concord public schools. In 1946 her heirs sold the house to James Eliot Newton, who owned and managed the Cooley's store on the Milldam. It has since been owned by the Roberts family.

Statement of Significance by

This house meets the criteria for individual listing on the National Register and as part of a district of large well-preserved buildings of the late eighteenth- to nineteenth-centuries at Concord center. As the eighteenth-century farmhouse of Capt. Samuel Jones it meets Criterion A. As the primary home of poet William Ellery Channing, it qualifies under Criterion B. As a well-preserved example of a Georgian vernacular farmhouse, it also meets Criterion C. In spite of having been moved, it possesses integrity of design, setting, materials, and workmanship, feeling and association.
